

The first comprehensive account of this booming democratic phenomenon

ISBN 9781907301322
Published July 2014
272pp, RRP £65 / €74

About the editors

Kimmo Grönlund is Professor of Political Science and Director of Research in the Social Science Research Institute at Åbo Akademi University, Finland. He works with large databases of register data, cross-national and national survey data, and experimental data on citizen deliberation.

André Bächtiger is Research Professor at the Swiss National Science Foundation in the University of Lucerne's Institute of Political Science. His research focuses on mapping and measuring deliberation, and understanding the preconditions and outcomes of high-quality deliberation in the context of representative institutions and of mini-publics.

Maija Setälä is Professor of Political Science at the University of Turku, Finland. She specialises in democratic theory, political trust, direct democracy and democratic innovation. Recently, Setälä has applied experimental methods in collaboration with a group of researchers organising field experiments on citizen deliberation.

Deliberative Mini-Publics: Involving Citizens in the Democratic Process

Edited by Kimmo Grönlund, André Bächtiger and Maija Setälä

A systematic review of the Mini-Publics phenomenon, this book discusses their weaknesses, and recommends ways to make them a viable component of democracy.

Contributors take stock of the diverse practices of deliberative mini-publics and, more concretely, look at preconditions, processes, and outcomes. The volume offers a critical assessment of the experience with mini-publics – in particular their lack of policy impact.

Bringing together leading scholars in the field, notably James S Fishkin and Mark E Warren, Deliberative Mini-Publics will speak to anyone with an interest in democracy and democratic innovations.

'comes at an urgent moment when many peoples are losing faith in the central institutions that constitute representative democracy... offers a science and philosophy to begin to rebuild that faith by reinventing the institutions of democratic engagement.'

Archon Fung, Ford Foundation Professor of Democracy and Citizenship, Harvard Kennedy School

'an outstanding volume that showcases the most up-to-date thinking and the latest research – both empirical and theoretical – on mini-publics.'

Simone Chambers
Professor of Political Science, University of Toronto

'contributions bring the reader up to date with developments in theory and practice, and open up new lines of theoretical and empirical enquiry.'

Albert Weale, Professor of Political Theory and Public Policy, University College London

'pools all important players in the field, providing a comprehensive overview of the current state of the art... indispensable for anybody interested in developments towards more deliberative forms of democracy.'

Brigitte Geißel, Head of the Democratic Innovations Research Unit, Goethe University, Frankfurt

Click here to buy this book